Feeding and Children with Autism
Presenter(s): Keith Williams, PhD. BCBA
Director, Feeding Program
Penn State Hershey Medical Center
Dr. Williams is a psychologist and behavior analyst with over 20 years of experience in the treatment of children’s feeding disorders.

Children with Autism Spectrum Disorder often have problems with feeding. Sometimes children with Autism refuse to eat certain foods and sometimes these children only eat food from certain food groups. Both of these issues place children with Autism at risk for a variety of health problems. These issues can also cause social interaction problems because these children are unable to eat with family or peers. This workshop will focus on evaluation and interventions used to help children with Autism improve feeding skills.

Health and Sexuality for Students with Development Disabilities
Presenter: Cathy Osborne
DCIU Professional Development Specialist

This training will consider the rationale for sexuality training for students with developmental disabilities as well as instructional strategies for home and school. Training material will include: body awareness and terminology, abuse prevention, social skills, and relationships. This workshop is based on the training “Bringing the Birds & Bees Down to Earth: Sexuality and Sexuality Education for Persons with Disabilities” presented by Lisa Mitchell, Licensed Clinical Social Worker. An extensive resource list will also be shared. The content of this training is focused on students approaching or going through puberty.
